Fonr years and more of war has produced great changes in the social condition of the insurrectionary States, and has materially affected the political relations heretofore existing between them and other States of the Union. These mighty changes cast ujon us the momentous question which I propose to consider. The importance of this question has never been equaled by any subject presented to an American Congress since the formation of our Government. In my opinion, upon its proper solution depends not only the peace and prosperity, but the existence of our country. Differences of opinion in regard to the condition of these States and as to...
